0-0-ROB'T M'CORMICK WINS CASE BEFORE JUDGE LANDIS

Robert R. McCormick, head of the Chicago Tribune, won the first skirmish in his battle with his cousin. Edward S. Adams, today when Judge Landis upheld his claim that Adam's owed him $42,000. This decision may throw the board of trade firm operated by Adams into the hands of a referee in bankruptcy, unless the Adams attorneys should win their contemplated appeal. The bankruptev case was one incident of the Adams-McCormick feud, which began with Adams' charge that McCormick allenated the affections of his divorced wife, Mrs. Amie Irwin Adams. Mc-Cormick said that he had loaned Adams the money and held notes to back up his assertion. Att'y Michael Gesas represented McCormick.
